

Vision: The US-India Institute has been established to promote a lasting partnership between the world's two largest democracies, rooted in stronger economic and national security ties between the two countries and reflecting their common commitment to preserving democratic freedoms.

Mission: The Institute will inform and educate policy makers, business leaders, the media and the public in the US and India on the important issues that underpin a long term strategic relationship between the world's oldest and largest democracies.

Program Goals:

- Find common ground and develop policy recommendations to enhance US – India ties
- Develop a broad consensus for a strategic relationship between the US and India by focusing on critical geo-strategic issues of national security, defense and economics.
- Inform and educate key policy makers in the US and India on issues of common interest
- Advocate the importance of the US-India relationship, founded on shared values, democratic principles and national security interests, to achieving and maintaining peace through stability, strength and economic freedom

Program Elements:

Policy and Research Documents

Reports ★ Briefs ★ Annual Report ★ Website Articles ★ Congressional Testimonies

Initiatives

Conferences ★ Roundtables ★ Seminars ★ Policy Luncheons and Receptions ★ Private Dinners ★ Meetings with Congress

Advisory Board

- Ashok Advani, Owner & Publisher, Business India
- Ambassador Harvey J. Feldman, former Alternate US Representative to the UN
- Sumit Ganguly, Rabindranath Tagore Chair Professor of Indian Cultures and Civilizations, Professor of Political Science at Indiana University
- C. Boyden Gray, Attorney, Wilmer, Cutler & Pickering; former White House Counsel to President Bush
- Deepak Lal, James S. Coleman Professor of International Development Studies, University of California; Professor Emeritus of Political Economy, University of London
- Dr. Bhupendra Kumar Modi, Chairman, MCorp and MFoundation
- Dr. Ramdas M. Pai, President, Manipal Academy of Higher Education, Manipal, India
- Vinod Patney, Air Marshall (Retired), Indian Air Force
- Dr. N. Bhaskara Rao, Chairman, Centre for Media Studies, India
- Malvika Singh, Publisher, Seminar Monthly
- T. N. Srinivasan, Samuel C. Park, Jr. Professor of Economics, Yale University
- Anupam Srivastava, Executive Director of the "India Initiative" of the University of Georgia, and of the South Asia Program of the University's Center for International Trade and Security
- Sir Alan Walters, Vice Chairman, American International Group (AIG); former Economic Advisor to Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher
- S. Enders Wimbush, Senior Fellow, Hudson Institute

The Raison D'Etire for the Institute

The US and India share common values and strategic interests in the areas of freedom, security and prosperity:

Shared Values: Freedom and Security

Common Strategic Interests:

- Establish close defense, economic and strategic relations
- Spread and strengthen common political principles of democracy, secularism, rule of law and liberal societies and economies
- Develop new coalition partnerships to pursue common interests and oppose common threats
- Ensure a stable, secure and prosperous Asian and Indian Ocean region
- Win the war on terrorism
- Enhance and protect trade and economic linkages in the Indian Ocean region
- Oppose the use of terror as a religious, ideological or political instrument

Shared Value: Prosperity

Common Strategic Interests:

- Establish close economic and trade relationships
- Expand trade in the defense, space and security industries
- Promote opportunities for US investments in India, in infrastructure, communications and energy

Critical opportunities are being missed to educate congressional policy makers and opinion leaders, senior journalists and academics about what can be done to enhance the security and economic ties between these two democracies.

The US-India Institute:

- Undertakes an organized, systematic effort to bring the positive benefits of a closer US-India relationship to the attention of the American people, to their elected leaders and to the media
- Is an independent, non-partisan, public policy institute, staffed by knowledgeable professionals experienced in international relations, defense, national security and economics

Sponsorship Options

$25,000 * $10,000 * $5,000

Various Benefits

- Exclusive access to key articles and documents produced by the US-India Institute
- Opportunity to network with key government officials and business leaders from the US and India in the areas of national security, defense and economics
- Invitations to key events, private dinners and luncheons
- Opportunities to sponsor conferences, seminars and/or programs
- Opportunities for speaking roles at conferences and seminars
- Opportunities for links to your company/university/organization website from the US-India Institute website
- Sponsor listing on website

For more information, please contact info@usini.org